SPECIAL NOTICE.

In order that we may publish next week a full report of the Masquerade Ball, which takes place next Friday evening, it will be necessary to delay the issue a few hours.

The edition probably will be ready for delivery at about 11 o'clock Saturday morning, which will contain a list of all the maskers and costumes.

Those wishing extra copies are requested to leave their orders at our office as early as possible.

An Appeal for No License.

To the Voters of Cohasset:

As the time draws near for you to say by your votes "whether the town will license the sale of intoxicating liquors or not," will you kindly listen to a word from Scituate? We have never believed that it was the deliberate purpose of the good people of Cohasset to favor license within their borders—but rather that it was through indifference and carelessness that it was permitted. What the experiment has brought to you, you know better than we do; but we begin to realize in a measure what it has brought to us. "No man liveth unto himself" is as true of towns as of individuals, and town and county lines cannot divide hearts or interests. Our sons have married your daughters and our daughters your sons, and what affects your welfare does in a measure ours also. We point with pride to your fine residences, your matchless scenery, and no sight seeing is complete, which does not include a drive through that loveliest of places, Jerusalem road, but we hang our heads for shame when we have to acknowledge that over all this magnificence hangs the curse which is sustained by the voters of Cohasset. But it seems even nearer to us than this. Our own citizens, husbands, fathers, sons, and brothers come staggering over the line that divides us, and bring sorrow and anguish to homes that but for your action might be spared this greatest of all afflictions. Not that we are so blind as to think liquor could not be bought in our town, but we know there are those who could not, and would not if they could, get it here who can and do get it in your town. If it is sold here it is against the expressed wishes of the people and in spite of their feeble efforts to stop it.

We beseech of you consider well this year, and do not let the enemy triumph over you while you slumber, but "watch, and be sober" knowing that your adversary is always awake and active.

Oh, Cohasset! beautiful Cohasset! for your own sake as well as for ours, put away the accursed thing from your midst; lest from every home within your borders, the cry goes up as it has from so many all over our land, Oh Absalom! my son! oh, my son! Would to God I had died for thee, oh, my son!

NORTH SCITUATE.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN COHASSET IN 1883.

The following is a list of the births and deaths registered by our Town Clerk for the year ending Dec. 31, 1883.

Dec. 3, Harry F. Lawrance, 14 years, 5 months, of Marlboro'.

ON A TARE.

Last Wednesday afternoon after taking a little too much of the ardent, Michael McCarthy, who is employed at the Tower Dairy, entered Smith's Hotel and undertook to pick a quarrel with a female employee.

He was promptly ejected by Joseph Fraies, an other employee of the house, and went to the front of the house and began to amuse himself by smashing windows by throwing stones one of which passed into Mr. J. E. Otis' barber shop, barely missing Capt. John Hollis who was sitting near the window at the time. Mr. Otis immediately dispatched word to Officer Wentworth, who was at North Scituate, at work.

Before the officer arrived, the apparently wild man collected quite an audience around the hotel and amused them by taring around the streets, throwing stones, etc.

On the arrival of the officer he was quickly dispatched to the lock-up. He was taken to Quincy Thursday morning, and pleaded "guilty" to a charge of drunkenness and received a fine of $1.00 and costs, and also pleaded "guilty" to breaking glass, for which he was fined $5 and costs, both of which fines he paid. The total expense of the celebration to Mr. McCarthy amounted to $28.15.

THE LECTURE.

The fifth entertainment of the People's Course was greeted by the usual storm and nasty walking for which every evening of the course thus far has been characterized, but in spite o the bad condition of the streets, an audience of nearly 150 people ventured out to listen to Gen. John L. Swift's popular lecture, entitled "Mission of Jumbo." The lecture was found to be much more interesting than was expected by many present. The speaker held the closest attention of the audience through out and by his pleasing manner and his excellent delivery, more than pleased every person who was fortunate enough to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Richards gave a reception Monday evening, Feb. 11, at No. 4 St. Charles street, Boston, to Mrs. Wilkin's boarders—consisting of those who passed so pleasant a season at Mrs. Wilkins' popular house in Cohasset last summer—and their friends. Among those present, we noticed Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Field, of Newton, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Wright, of Longwood, Miss Goodwin, of Abington, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Sampson, of Boston, Mr. Alvin Reed, of Boston, Miss Reed, of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Shapleigh, of Boston, Mrs. L. P. Beals, of Cohasset, and Mr. Charles Tinkham. The entertainment was of a social order interspersed with vocal and instrumental music, poetry, etc. Later a collation was served.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Cohasset Free Public Library which was held last Saturday, the reports of the Librarian and Treasurer were accepted. Mr. Lot W. Bates tendered his resignation as one of the board and Miss Edith M. Bates was chosen to fill the vacancy.

It seems as if the interest taken by some of the trustees was very small when it becomes necessary to appoint three meetings before a quorum could be obtained, especially when but five members are required for a quorum.

TIT BITS.

Next Friday.

The annual masquerade.

Have you got your costume ready?

Full account in next week's issue.

Hurry up and get your tickets.

The number of tickets already sold guarantees a success.

Music by Harrishorne's Orchestra, 4 pieces.

If you don't attend the entertainments more, the managers will "get stuck."

The body of Mr. Alex. Litchfield was brought to Cohasset for interment Wednesday.

At a special meeting of the trustees of the Cohasset Savings bank held last Monday, Mr. Chas. F. Tilden was chosen to fill the vacancy in the board caused by the resignation of Mr. Alfred Whittington. The trustees then proceeded to ballot for a treasurer and Mr. Caleb Lothrop was elected to the position by a vote of 7 to 6 for Mr. D. N. Tower, which vote was afterward made unanimous.

The next in the course, the orchestral entertainment by the Cohasset Musical Association, will probably be one of the best if not the best of the course. The rare opportunity of seeing forty-seven musicians, both male and female, brought together in one orchestra, (this is the only town in the State which can boast of such an organization), should in itself bring out one of the largest audiences of the course. Be there early and avoid the rush.

The Cohasset Musical Association will meet for rehearsal this evening. A full attendance is requested.

We were handsomely remembered in the way of valentines Thursday. Thanks.

A petition is being circulated among the ladies of the town, by a committee from Henry Bryant Post G. A. R. for signatures of those who are willing to assist in making arrangements for a G. A. R. fair next summer. It is being very freely signed.

New moon the 26th.

It is all right, but it looks queer to see a number of marble players plying their vocation in a snow-storm yet such has been the case.

The cove was entirely free from ice Thursday.

The valentine business is reported by out dealers to have been the best for many years.

Louis T. Cushing, Esq., and family, expect to start for home sometime next week. He writes that they have enjoyed their stay there very much. Spring has just commenced to put in appearance there. He will see something different here.

Centennial Anniversary
OF THE
TOWN OF COHASSET
MAY 7, 1870.

Thomas Russell's Address.

The Declaration of Independence was in December, copied into the town records. That Declaration, as all the world knows, contained the immortal words, "All men are created equal." Now, I say it unreservedly, these words have become flesh [here the speaker pointed to Senator Revels], and appear before us to day.

The town did its full share of service in the war. One full company, commanded by Capt. Joh Cushing, was attached to Col. Revere's regiment. Capt. Stowers commanded a company, nearly all from Cohasset, who did good duty on the coast; and Noah Nichols was commissioned as captain of an artillery company comprising many Cohasset men.

In the early days of the controversy, your town was represented at the Boston tea-party by Major James Steddard. Tradition tells, also, of an English brig bound for Boston with supplies for the British army becalmed off these shores, and taken by a boat manned by Cohasset men. Major Steddard was the leading spirit on this occasion; and when one of the boat's crew pointed to the brig's artillery and proposed to return, the major declared that there should be no going back. The defences of the brig proved to be "quaker guns," and she became an easy prize. Her cargo was rum; and if, as is reported, the town was for a few days a little more lively than usual, we must borrow the words of Burke, and "pardon something to the spirit of liberty."

Many of you must remember the veteran Noah Nichols, who was accustomed in his old age to shoulder his fire-lock

"And show how fields were won."

You have heard his story of Washington ordering him to repair the wheel of a gun carriage while on a forced march, of his request for permission to stop while mending it, and of the general's abrupt refusal. "It was the hardest thing I ever did," the old man would add, "but I did it."

One of your truest patriots in this contest was Joseph Bates. Marching to join the army around Boston, he declared that he should never return. He fought at Bunker Hill, and when the ammunition of the Americans had failed, and they were obliged to retreat, he was seen throwing stones at the well-armed British soldiers as they swarmed into the redoubt. Such was the spirit of our fathers, firm in defeat; cast down but not destroyed. Well did Washington say, when he heard of the result, the rest can, the British victory, but heard, also, of the spirit of the people—well did he say: "Thank God, America is free." When a man is in earnest for the right, whether he stands on a lost battlefield in Charlestown, Massachusetts, or beneath a gallows in Charlestown, Virginia, he knows that failure is only the prelude of success, and that death will, at last, be swallowed up in victory.

During the war, in 1780, the Constitution of this State was adopted, with its Bill of Rights, containing the words: "All men are created free and equal." These words are often misquoted as occurring in the Declaration of Independence, when the slaveholder who wrote that instrument did not and could not use the word "free." It was inserted in our Bill of Rights by a wise judge, in order to abolish human bondage in Massachusetts. Previous to this time, slavery was held to have a legal existence in Massachusetts; and, as the old records of Hingham show, even the soil of Cohasset was trodden by masters and slave. But after the adoption of the State Constitution, a fellow-townsman of your fathers by birth, Levi Lincoln, trying the cause of a man held as a slave in Worcester County, procured the decision that broke the shackles of every bondman in Massachusetts. Mr. Lincoln, who was born in Hingham, rose to great eminence at the bar, was chosen to Congress, was appointed attorney-general, held the office of lieutenant-governor in this State, and declined appointment as judge of the Supreme court of the United States. But his greatest honor was, that he pleaded the cause of the oppressed, and won a victory for freedom.

This was one of the forward steps that gained for our State its proud position. When the Fifteenth Amendment went into operation a few weeks since, it had no effect in Massachusetts. Here was no law which it could repeal. Other States obtained their freedom with a great price. We were born free.

The war of 1812 found the men of Cohasset ready to stand by the flag, although there was not always unanimity of opinion, and although the town had suffered greatly from the embargo. They forgot that they were Democrats or Federalists and only remembered that they were Americans. A committee of safety was choosen, a coast guard of seventy-five was formed, and a committee was sent to ask arms and ammunition from the State. Lieut. Gov. Cobb (in the absence of Gov. Strong), refused the request, and recommended the hoisting of a white flag. The men of Hingham disdained the timic counsels of the executive, and finally procured muskets and a field piece. The executive of to-day would give no such prudent advice in any similar peril. Governor and lieutenant-governor alike would counsel the use of no flag except their country's flag,—and that, nailed to the mast.

SCITUATE.

Hon. John D. Long has our thanks for public documents.

Mr. C. A. Damon and daughter were in town last Saturday.

Capt. John L. Manson has returned from San Francisco, Cal.

Notice the advertisement of cow for sale in another column.

Mr. John T. Maddock has his sailboat finished, and has commence another

Mr. Peleg Ford of Greenbush, has on exhibition at his store, a Jerusalem rabbit (?)

The Satuit Library have received two handsome calendars from Capt. H. F. Vinal.

Mr. Benj. Turner and wife of Boston, spent Sunday with his father, Mr. Sam'l Turner.

The Shakesperean Club met with Miss Gertrude Vinal, Monday evening. A full attendance of the members.

Capt. Wm. Bates and Mr. M. B. Colman have built three sailboats this winter, and have two more to build.

Mrs. Isaac Porter of Wenham, and Miss H. F. Porter of New York, are visiting Mr. Wm. P. Richardson.

A new beacon has recently been put in the place of the one that was washed away by the ice, not long ago.

Miss Jennie Clapp is attending the Art School in Boston. She has displayed very good taste in painting.

The subject of discourse at the Unitarian church on Sunday next, will be the "Career of Wendell Phillips."

Capt. Geo. W. Brown and family returned home last week. Although not fully recovered from his sickness he is some better and able to go out.

Mrs. J. L. Whiton and son and Mrs. Dr. Sauls and daughter of Quincy made a visit to Mrs. J. L. Litchfield, Thursday.

Last Sunday there was the largest congregation of the season at the M. E. Church, and the first pleasant day for a week.

A neck-tie party and supper was held at the Catholic church, Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the choir. A social time and about $13 realized.

We are indebted to Mrs. Edwin Bowditch, for a supper of baked beans and brown bread, cooked in her steam cooker. They were very nice.

The primary schools and West Grammar will close on Thursday, Feb. 21. High and East Grammar schools will close on Friday, Feb. 29.

The members of the Satuit Library Association are invited to meet at the building, on Saturday evening, Feb. 16, to repair and cover books.

Mr. J. T. Clements, formerly proprietor of the South Shore House, and more recenily of East Weymouth, is now located at Silver's Hotel, Newmarket, N. H.

Five young men, with John Durphy as skipper, have chartered schooner Nauset, and started Thursday to gather rockweed along the shore, and sell the same in Hingham.

At the dedicatory services of the People's Church, Boston, held every evening this week, Mr. Frank Young of this place, is acting as one of the ushers.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the Unitarian church, gave a sociable at Mrs. C. T. Chubuck's, Wednesday evening. The evening was passed very pleasantly in social intercourse, games, music, etc.

The Melrose Journal in its last issue, printed the original story by Rev. N. Scaver, Jr., which appeared in the HERALD, a short time ago, giving proper credit. Rev. Mr. Scaver formerly lived in Melrose.

Upon our inside pages may be found an original story by a little boy, communication from Hartwick, an article about Sunday trains by Rev. D. B. Ford of Hanover, County news and general miscellany.

Mr. Leonard Raymond brings in the first lobsters of the season. He set ten of his pots, last week, in sixteen fathom of water, and Tuesday of this week he pulled eight of them from which he took twenty-one lobsters. This is from four to six weeks earlier than they have ever been caught before.

CORRECTION—In the letter of "H. B. H." of our last issue, the word "Saharas" should have read "oases." The writer informs us that the article was written hastily, that he was thinking of the great African desert of Sahara, but meant to have written oases. As we had previously been instructed to "follow copy," we did so in this case.

The Plymouth County Prohibition Home Protection Association will hold a convention at Good Templars' hall, Hingham, next Thursday, commencing at nine o'clock in the morning and continuing during the day. In the evening the convention will meet in the vestry of the Methodest church, where addresses will be made by some of those prominent in the temperance cause.

"One of our summer residents having bought some flour of Chubuck & Co., while here, sent an order to them from Boston for more, saying it was the best flour they had ever used, and at cheapest price. This may look a little strange that our grocers should have orders from Boston, but it shows that a good article at as little money, may be bought at home, without going out of town.

The supper and entertainment given by the Organ Society, Tuursday evening, was a success, both socially and financially. A large company was present, which owing to the bad walking was quite surprising. The entertainment consisted of singing by the Glee Club, Messrs. Young, Cole, Hunt and Wade, Misses Olive Causey and Lillie Litchfield; readings by Misses Etta Taylor and Olive Causey. The supper was excellent, and ample justice was done to it by all present. The molasses candy of Capt. Wm. Bates' making sold like hot cakes, there not being enough to supply the demand. The proceeds will net the Society some $15.00, which far exceeded their expectations, this being their first attempt at anything of the kind.

NORTH SCITUATE.

Mr. Bart Prouty has moved into one portion of J. C. and J. H. Merritt's house.

On account of the weather, the lecture for Wednesday evening was postponed.

Mr. Charles H. Newcomb, of Boston, is on a flying visit to his friends in Newcombville.

Mr. Dayton Litchfield, of this place, is to do the mason work on addition of the Atlantic House, Nantasket Beach.

Mr. C. E. Bailey finds he is obliged to give up his work in the shop to attend to his own work, and a man from Braintree is expected to take his place.

Mrs. John P. Cushing and her son, of Denison, Iowa, leave here for their home to-day, after an absence of more than six months spent in visiting friends in Vermont and Massachusetts.

Mr. J. W. Reed has moved into the house belonging to J. C. and J. H. Merritt, and works in George H. Damon's factory, in the bottoming department. He was formerly foreman of the same business in Sterling's factory, Weymouth Landing.

Mr. Joseph Gannett has brought an action of tort against George H. Briggs, over a piece of land between Gannett's property and Brigg's mill, which he claims is his and has a right to keep the bars up, but Briggs claims it to be a public right of way for watering horses. The case is to come before the February term, if possible.

On Wednesday evening D. G. W. C. T., J. W. Morris, installed the following officers of Old Oaken Bucket Lodge, I. O. G. T., Charles H. Newcomb, W. C. T.; Mary L. Clapp, W. V. T.; F. B. Lee, W. S.; M. C. Morris, W. F. S.; A. A. Seaverns, W. T.; A. A. Morris, W. Chap.; J. W. Morris, W. Marshal; George H. Bates, W. G. G.; W. F. Balis, W. I. G.; Lydia F. Vinal, W. D. M.; George H. Newcomb, W. A. S.; F. T. Newcomb, W. R. H. S.; Annie W. Vinal, W. I. H. S.

G. A. R.

There will be a regular meeting of Post 31, on Monday evening next, at which several important committees will be chosen. Comrades come up and see the new floor.

Since last report we have received from Mrs. Edwin Bailey a fine steel engraving of the "Old Oaken Bucket."

The G. A. R. Sewing Circle will meet on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 21, at the house of A. A. Seaverns.

Mr. Editor:

Will the town of Scituate get a report from the beach committee this year? or must we listen to the findings of Mssrs. and Kingman auditors as formerly, and to the rulings of Judge Bacon more latterly. Or must we put up with the opinion of the Supreme Court? Responsible parties from out of town say, our town owes the counsel employed by the beach committee for the last three years service, if this is so, is it not time we paid the same? Who knows, please report.

THE SCITUATE BEACH CASES.

Wednesday judgment was entered in the Superior Court against the town of Scituate in the cases of Deacon Marshall Litchfield against the town, involving the question of the title of the town in the beaches north of Scituate Hrook at the harbor, and that of the town against E. Parker Welch and wife, involving the title of the town to the beaches south of the harbor. The former case has been in court since 1876, and there has been a trial by jury, two long hearings before Judge Mason as an auditor, and a law argument before the full court Judge Mason ruled the law against the deacon, Judge Bacon ruled in favor of the town, but the decision of the Supreme Court effectually disposed of the cases by declaring that the town never had any title under original grants from the Old Colony, and had obtained no title since. We congratulate the deacon who is eighty-nine years old, that he survived to see a successful close of this long suit, which has been so energetically prosecuted, with so much labor and ability by our townsmen Judge C. G. Davis assisted by Mr. Simmons, and defended so persistently by Harris & Tucker. It has cost the town of Scituate some five thousand dollars and will cost it still more.—The Bee.

NORTH SCITUATE, Feb. 12.

Mr. Editor.

In answer to Improvement No. 1, pubished in the HERALD date Jan. 18, as regards to accepting Chap. 27, Sec. 64. It does not seem to me that as long as we can elect our Chairman of Selectmen for sixteen years in succession, and the other two for seven years each, and as long as we cannot change them, at least, as often as once in one, two or three years, we cannot in reason accept the above Chap. 27, Sec. 64.

IMPROVEMENT No. 2.

Ministers' Association.

The Methodist Ministers' Association of the Providence district, held a very interesting session this week in the East Weymouth Church. Rev. M. J. Talbot, D. D., presided and Revs. W. J. Smith and J. H. Nutting were the Secretaries.

On Monday evening a sermon was preached by Rev. C. H. Ewer of Stoughton. Tuesday was devoted to essays and discussions. Carefully prepared papers were read by Revs. J. H. Nuttings of Warren, R. I. and C. L. Goodell of Providence. Upon Presiding Elders as members of the General Conference; by Rev. W. H. Meeds of Providence upon the present attitude of our Church in regard to caste in the South; and by Rev. F. D. Blakesley, principal of East Greenwich Seminary, upon the question: are our Conference Seminaries needed? A hearty interest in the subjects was shown by the ministers present, nearly every one taking some part in the discussions, which were very spirited. Wednesday morning was devoted to the consideration of the following:—Presiding Elders; how they should be elected and what should be their Cabinet Status. Able papers upon this subject were presented by Rev. W. H. Stetson and Rev. A. J. Church, D. D., of Providence, followed by interesting remarks by several other ministers. The Association adjourned Wednesday noon. Its next meeting will be held in Bristol next June.

A VALENTINE.

St Valentine's Day! and I wonder my friend
As the many sweet notes you receive,
With jokes all in fun and love half expressed,
If there's any that you will believe?

Will you turn away with regret for the hour
That you have spent in looking them o'er,
With a wish that is true, and that half expressed,
That Valentines might pass by your door?

O, will they bring delight and lead you to dream
Of some lassie with black raven hair,
Who has worshiped afar, not daring to speak,
But now challenges her lover fair?

Let be what there will in your bounty to-day,
And you prize them or cast them away,
Will you let one sincere but odd a request
As the night drapes the sun of to-day.

It is this—that He who on mortal bestows
The only good twins him given,
Will lay for you at His own right hand
A rich, glorious crown in heaven.

A crown that will sparkle with jewels won
By a straight forward journey below,
Your welcome, "Well done" when your Master receives
For the work that your talents shall show.

A Day in the Woods.

BY A. W. L.

"School!" said Richard White, to himself. "School! I don't want to go school. Why can I sent to school every day? What good is there in learning grammar, and arithmetic, and geography, and all them things. I don't like school and never did."

"Dick!" called out a voice, and the lad, who had seated himself on a cellar door, and placed his satchel beside him, looked up and met the cheerful face of one of his school-fellow.

"What are you setting there for Dick? Don't you hear the school bell?"

"Yes, I hear it, Bill."

"Then get up and come along, or you will be late."

"I don't care if I am, I don't like to go to school."

"You don't?

"No, indeed, I'd never go to school if I could help it. What's the use of so much learning? I'm going to a trade as soon as I get old enough; and George Strang says that a boy who don't know a b c can learn a trade just as well, as one who does."

"I don't know anything about that," replied William Brown, "but father says, the more learning I get when a boy, the more successful in life will I be when a man, that is, if I make a good use of my learning."

"What good is grammar going to do a mechanic I wonder?" said Richard, contemptuously. "What use will the double rule of three or fractions be to him?"

"They may be of a great deal of use. Father says we cannot learn too much while we are boys. He says he never learned anything in his life that did not come of use to him at some time or other."

"Grammar and geography and double rule of three will never be of any use to me."

"Oh, yes, they will, Dick; so come along. The bell is nearly done ringing, come, won't you?"

"No, I'm going out to the woods."

"Come Richard, come! That will be playing truant."

"No, I've made my mind up not to go to school to-day."

"You'll be sorry for it, Dick, if you do stay away from school."

"Why will I?" said the boy, quickly. "Are you going to tell?"

"If I should be asked about you, I will not tell a lie, but I don't suppose anyone will inquire of me."

"Then why will I be sorry?"

"You'll be sorry when you're a man."

Richard White laughed aloud at the idea of his sorry part. William started for school and was late. Richard started for the woods and had a good time. He chased squirrels, treed them and then got up himself. When all at once he fell out of a tree and cut his face badly. From that moment all the pleasure he had left since entering the woods was gone. The blood stained his shirt-bosom, and covered his hand when he put it up to his face.

Of course, the wound and the blood upon his shirt would betray him. This was his first thought, as he washed himself at a small stream. But then, all at once it occurred to him that it would be just as easy to say that a boy threw a stone which struck him as he was walking along the street, as to say that he got hurt while he was in the woods. And, without stopping to think how wicked it would be to tell a lie, Richard determined to make this statement when he got home.

The smarting of the wound and the uneasiness occasioned by a sight of the blood, so disturbed Richard's feelings, that he was unable to regain enough composure of mind to enjoy his day of freedom in the woods. At twelve o'clock, he was tired and hungry, and heartily wished himself at home. But it would not do to go now; for if he were to do so, his father would understand that he had not been to school. There was no alternative for him but to remain out in the lonely woods, without anything to eat, for five hours longer. And a weary time it was for him. At last the sun, which had been for a very long time, it seemed to him, descending toward the western horizon, sunk so low that he was sure it must be after five o'clock.

And then with sober feelings, he started for home. The day had disappointed him. He was far from feeling happy. When he thought of the wound on his face and the blood upon his bosom, he felt troubled. If he told the truth, he knew he would be punished, and if he told a lie and was found out, punishment would as certainly follow.

These were his thoughts and feelings when he came to the place where he had concealed his satchel. But, lo! his books were gone. Some one had discovered and carried them off.

Sadly enough now, did Richard White return home. We will not pain our young readers with an account of his reception. The father already knew that his son had not been to school, for a man had found the satchel in the woods. Richard's name was on it, and this led the man to bring it to his father, with whom he was acquainted. Richard never went to school again. On the very next week, he was sent to learn a trade, and he soon found that there was a great difference between a school-boy and an apprentice.

William Brown continued to go to school two years longer, when he also went from home to learn a trade. He was then a good scholar and had a fondness for books.

Because he was learning a trade, he did not give up all other kinds of learning, but, whenever he had leisure he applied himself to his books. Both he and Richard were free about the same time. Richard had learned his trade well, and was as good a workmen as William, but he had not improved his mind. He had not been able to see the use that learning was going to be to a mechanic.

Fifteen years have passed since these two lads completed their terms of apprenticeship, and entered the world as men; and how do they now stand? Why, William Brown has a large manufactory of his own, and Richard White is one of his workmen.

By his superior intelligence and enterprise, the former is able to serve the public interests by giving direction to the labor of a hundred men, and his reward is in proportion to the service he thus renders; while the latter serves the public interest to the extent of only one man's labors, and his reward is in the exact ratio thereto. Did Richard White gain anything by his day in the woods? We think not. Is there any use in education to a mechanic? Let each of our young readers answer the question for himself.

Food for Thought.

As love thinks no evil, so envy speaks no good.

Honest men's words are as good as their bonds.

He that grasps at too much holds nothing fast.

We have sufficient strength to support the misfortunes of others.

There is no benefit so small that a good man will not magnify it.

It is a barren kind of criticism which tells you what a thing is not.

A secret is too little for one, enough for two and too much for three.

Recollect that trifles make perfection and that perfection is no trifle.

A cheerful face is nearly as good for an invalid as healthy weather.

Who never walks save where he sees men's tracks, make no discoveries.

The utility of virtue is so plain that the unprincipled feign it from policy.

Unbecoming forwardness oftener proceeds from ignorance than imprudence.

Humility is the base of every virtue, and they who dig the deepest build the safest.

To correct an evil which already exists, is not so wise as to force and prevent it.

The Local Paper.

The local paper is the best read paper in the world. All the city papers cannot supply the place of the home paper. No other contains the marriages and deaths, to say nothing of divorces and births; no other gives time for the next ball, picnic or political meeting; no other discusses the affairs of the town or county, or gives in detail the local news, which can be obtained from no other source. Everybody reads, and that is why the unpretentious local paper is the best read paper in the world.—N. Y. Truth.

Labor, Liquor and Tobacco.

Mr. Editor.

I do not wish to be obtrusive, but would really like to have the privilege of criticising the excerpt from the N. Y. Observer, which appears in your issue of Jan. 18. I begin to believe that Tennyson's recipe of "kindly silence when they bawl" will not do in all cases; its about time that the workingman should turn around and return some of the slaps in the face that he is continually getting.

Why, it is impossible to take up a paper nowadays without being confronted with the infamous lie and slander that the worker's self indulgent love for liquor and tobacco is the direct and sufficient cause for all his degradation and poverty; that "luxury" is what's the matter with his weary bones.

Mr. Medill brought on some "statistics" of course. These fellows are nothing if not statistical. And we have statistics fail to move the great unthinker, then hits can be done with "pathetic incident."

Incident is not argument, and statistics are the best things in the world, ad captandum vulgus, if all the facts of the case are not fully explained. For instance, did Mr. Medill in his "calculations to show the vast amount of money expended on these useless and often injurious articles," remember the fact that five hundred per cent of this "vast amount" was taxation and monopolistic profit. Mr. Medill and his statistical friends are just a trifle forgetful about some things.

As to the "useless and often injurious" narcotics which God has kindly permitted the great Latin races of progress and enlightenment to use in lieu of opium and hasheesh, I have no time at present to comment upon them, but I think I could show upon occasion that they are of some little use in the great economy of nature. I must stick to my subject and refute the slander I have spoken of. In the first place, it won't to do take too much stock in "away off" statistics. It seems that a large majority of every body, out of Plymouth county, gets terribly drunk and beats their wife. Every living soul who is poor and works for a living, outside of our district purlieus, chews and smokes a plug of tobacco a day, which would cost about two cents to manufacture and sell if there was fair play, and is thereby ruined, ruined, ruined!

But let us look at things right around here in our favored locality. We will take my friend and neighbor, Mr. Smith, have known him from youth—went to school with him. I must acknowledge he is a terrible debauchee. He revels in luxury. In his reckless extravagance, he uses two plugs a week and two quarts of liquor a year. His wife works, too; they have but one child, they are as poor as church mice, and the head of the household never loafs a day if he can help it; but after the facts I have given the editors of the Chicago Tribune and New York Observer will not wonder. I don't wonder either, but I don't exactly attribute his poverty to the same reasons as they—want of intelligence on my part, I suppose. Perhaps it is from want of honesty on theirs. Out of the writer's acquaintance, by sight and reputation, of probably of a thousand persons, there is not half a dozen whose incontrolable appetites for liquor and tobacco would reduce them to the verge of poverty, even at the present taxation prices, were they receiving fair wages for fair day's works. I would respectfully ask every reader of this paper to run over their acquaintance list to see if they cannot bring in the same verdict. These are the kind of statistics that are most reliable—founded on personal experience and therefore most convincing, as what we see we can believe.

It is stated that a shoe manufacturer in South Abington, proposed the other day to dock his men, and when they demurred stating that they were not making any to much to provide for their families, he replied "Porks and beans are good enough for people that labor."

This might possibly shock Mr. Medill and his kith and kin, the surface philosophers; but I hold it to be exactly in their line of treatment.

Of what earthly necessity to sustain life, any more than rum and tobacco, is beefsteak and oysters when the delightful aroma of glorious pork and beans floats o'er the festive board?

Thank you, Mr. Manufacturer, for letting us down easy, you might have said, "the gold and silvery hoe-cake made of cobmeal." You are saving that for the next dock. And when the age of "luxuries" is past, and men living on the fodder of hogs, have the brains of hogs, the aspirations of hogs, I can give you a hint how to address them,

"Tut, tut, hog alive! wherefore art thou? What extravagance—what a waste of golden meal to sustain thy miserable existence! What a useless annual expense when a few dollars invested in a pine coffin would end all. Come, come! wrap the drapery of thy bundle of straw about thee and lie down to pleasant dreams."

SCITUATE, Feb., 1884.

As lieutenant man is like an unsealed letter, everybody can read him, but the wise man seeketh in time what in time he will surely need—a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

About Sunday Trains.

BY REV. DAVID B. FORD, HANOVER, MASS.

It has doubtless come to the knowledge of many of your readers that the Old Colony Baptist Association, meeting at North Scituate, October 10th, and the Pilgrim Conference at Marshfield a week later, petitioned the Railroad Commissioners, respectfully asking them to determine whether the running of Sunday trains to Plymouth and through Plymouth County is of such public necessity and convenience as to require by their authorization the running of said trains; and furthermore, that said Commissioners have decided that the forbidding of these trains is beyond their jurisdiction. The law of 1881 under which we suppose they could act in this matter reads as follows: "The Board of Railroad Commissioners may authorize the running upon any railroad of such through trains on the Lord's day as in the opinion of the Board the public necessity and convenience may require, having regard to the due observance of the day." In their published decision they say that "the act of 1881 was passed in order to meet the needs, occasional and exceptional, of certain trains running over the State railroad, and to save the State from appearing to violate its own laws." In a private letter Judge Russell, Chairman of the Board, writes that "the object was to cover the case of the State railroad, but the statute covers all cases, giving us power to permit, but not power to forbid." Innocently supposing that the one power involved the other, and knowing that the Board last summer refused to authorize the running of Sunday trains on the Housatonic Railroad, which is neither a State road nor has any connection with State road, we therefore petitioned as we did, with the disappointing result indicated above. The Board in their interpretation of the law seem rather disposed to limit their power than to usurp authority. They deem themselves unable either to "authorize" or refuse to authorize the running of Sunday trains on any railroad, unless the railroad in question shall petition for such authorization—all petitions to them, in reference to this matter, from all other sources being wholly inapt and to no purpose. Our object, however, in writing this is not to discuss the law or question its interpretation by the Commissioners (some of whom at least, as we feel, are in their hearts favorably disposed toward our endeavor), but simply to state things as they are for the information of others.

A few words as to Sunday excursioning. In our opinion this whole excursion business on the Lord's day, especially on our steam railroads, is not only demoralizing in its influence, but is a nuisance which ought to be abated and abolished, invading as it does the peace of our streets, the peace of our public ground, the peace of our sanctuaries, the peace of our homes. And we think the good people of our State may well rise as one man to demand of our Legislature an act prohibiting this business. If the populace of our crowded cities must have their Sunday excursions during the hot summer months, let them take passage morning or evening, on board of our steamers, and let these same steamers be permitted to land their passengers (save in case of accident, or unforeseen emergency) only at the wharves where they started. In this way, our quiet country towns can still enjoy their desired quiet, and we be still permitted to say, as the Pilgrims did concerning the first Lord's day spent on American shores, "On the Sabboth day we rested."—The Watchman.

The Plymouth County Agricultural Society will hold a Farmers' Institute, commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M., at Town Hall, Middleboro, Saturday, Feb, 23d. Addresses will be given by J. W. Pierce, of West Milbury; and Z. A. Gilbert, Secretary of the State of Maine Board of Agricultural—to be followed by discussions. The public are invited to attend. Special invitation extended to the ladies to attend. A collation will be provided by the citizens. Return tickets over O. C. R. R. furnished those attending the Institute.

At a meeting of the citizens of South Abington interested in the removal of the county seat on Monday evening of last week, the subject was freely discussed by leading townsmen, who were unanimous that some immediate action should be taken to prevent if possible Brockton's half-shire project and also to oppose any appropriation which may be asked for to repair the old buildings at Plymouth. All seemed to be unbelievers as to the best way of getting at the matter but the sense of the meeting seemed to be in favor of preventing any action being taken in the Legislature the present Winter, so that it may be properly brought before the people the coming Summer, and that the location be left to a commission appointed by the Supreme court. All the speakers expressed themselves as being opposed to a half-shire for any town, believing that some location can be selected which will be satisfactory to the county. A committee was chosen to appear at the hearing to oppose these measures.

SOUTH SHORE AND COUNTY.

Shoe manufacturers of Brockton report a better outlook for their business.

The Court House at Abington was entered one night last week, but nothing taken of any value.

Walter Swaine of Rockland has enlisted in the United States army, and is stationed in New Mexico.

Mr. Augustus Pratt of North Middleboro is one of the directors of the New England Milk Producers' Association.

About 125 couples were in attendance at the Leap Year Party at Loring Hall, Hingham, last Tuesday evening.

Mr. Homer B. Richmond of Lakeville has recently sold a black setter dog to Boston parties for $125.

Twelve foxes have been killed this year, ahead of Mr. McAllister's dog, Nero, of Middleboro, and the season is not yet up.

At the Sunday School session of the M. E. Church at Hingham, Sunday week, forty names were obtained to the Francis Murphy pledge.

It is reported that the general government will continue to make improvements at Long Beach Wareham, the present season.

One day last week Debuty Sheriff Spring of Hingham, had five boys of that place before the court for maliciously smashing windows in unoccupied buildings.

H. Z. Wright, checker editor of the Yankee Blade, visited Rockland last week and contested 156 games with 17 local players, and won 122.

Wareham has the reputation of the finest roads in the county, and they are built of oyster shells generously showered upon a sandy and sterile soil.

In Abington, young men who stand in fear of the consequences of Leap Year wear brass rings on the little finger, which means, "Not in the market."

In the case of a Charles A. Brown of Hingham for $1,500 for injuries sustained on the street, a verdict for that amount has been set aside as illegal, which will probably dispose of the case.

The saloon kept by George Morrell in Abington was raided early Sunday morning, while gambling was in progress. The money and implements were captured and arrests were made.

Mr. W. H. Dunham and his sons, William and Charles, and Mr. Edward Dunham, left Rock (Middleboro), for Brunswick, Georgia, last week. They took the steamer Gate City from Boston.

One of the grocers of Middleboro has posted a "black list" in his store, on which are the names of numerous persons who have failed to pay their bills. The sum due is set against their names.

Frank Dexter Pratt died at the residence of his parents, Benjamin P. and Mary Pratt, of South Hingham, January 18th, of malignant scarlet fever, at the early age of sixteen years.

The Old Colony Railroad Company have been laying water pipes in Abington recently, and thawed the frozen ground by injecting steam through a rubber hose for that purpose.

Samuel Lincoln, while engaged in cutting wood in New Bridge lane, Hingham, last Monday, cut one of his feet, inflicting a pretty severe wound, but he was able to walk to his home.

Capt. S. B. Gibbs, Jr., of Middleboro, set forth on his first voyage as commander, on the 6th inst., in charge of the good bark W. H. Besse, with a cargo of general merchandise for Australia.

The Library which the Baptist Sabbath-school of Middleboro purchased at a cost of $20 has been put on board of the bark William H. Besse. This is the fifth vessel which has been similarly provided by this society.

The Old Colony railroad company have presented a bill to the legislature asking that the Cape Cod Ship Canal company be fully subjected to such general laws relating to railroad corporations as can be applied to it.

Mr. Alton Chandler of North Carver came near having a serious accident while out riding. His horse became unmanageable and ran breaking both shafts of the carriage, but fortunately Mr. Chandler was uninjured.

The faculty of Dartmouth college have awarded an honorable mention to A. E. Briggs of Middleboro, of class of '85, for distinguished work in mathematics during the first two years of the course.

John Kingsley residing at Obery, was cutting wood last Tuesday week, when his axe slipped and struck the top of his foot, making a cut about an inch long and severing an artery from which he soon died.

The selectmen of Middleboro and Lakeville have issued and posted about the ponds the fishing regulations, and announce that all violations of the same will be prosecuted. Many have been abusing the privileges of fishing.

Mr. Samuel Keith of East Bridgewater, started last week for a trip to Florida. He will pass several days in Washington and other cities of the South on his way, and probably return in March or April.

Mr. Andrew Sturtevant of Bridgewater, had a little trouble with his wife, recently, which resulted in his receiving a wound by the point of a pair of her scissors in the palm of his left hand. It is feared that lock-jaw will set in. The wound is a very serious one.

While Middleboro and Bridgewater are boasting of their smart women, the amount of bread baked, number of biscuits made, etc., we do not think that any of them can boast, as Carver can, of a woman that takes her evening smoke while preparing the biscuits.

Last year the Plymouth Cordage Company paid duties at that port amounting to $68,000, and during the last nineteen years the duties on goods imported by them foot up over $485,000. The company is the largest of the kind in the country.

The Wareham striking nailers have gone into the woods chopping for 80 cents a day, and the regular choppers, who had been getting $1 a day, say this is small business. The nailers were getting $1.12 and $1.25 a day at their own work when they struck.

Rev. W. B. Davey, recently pastor of the Baptist church, of Hanson, has accepted a professorship in the agricultural department of the literary and theological school for colored people, Nashville, Tenn., and departed last week for his new field of labor. Rev. Ephraim Hapgood supplies his place.

Early Friday morning of last week Mr. E. Sprague's drug store of North Abington, was entered by thieves, and a quantity of jewelry and cutlery stolen. The money drawer was broken from its fastenings and was found by the officers in the Elmwood cemetery. No trace of the thieves has been discovered.

Ex-Gov. Long has introduced a bill in Congress asking for an appropriation not exceeding $50,000 for the erection of a public building at Plymouth to accommodate the customs and postal service. The revenue collected last year from that port netted the Government $69,000.

Last Wednesday, a dog owned by L. J. B. Lincoln, of Hingham, was struck by the express train, and was thrown against a fence. The animal was somewhat astonished at the manner in which it was urged to move on, but gathering up its wits, it hastily decamped away.

Mr. James R. Whitehead, of Bridgewater an employe at the Iron Works, had one of his legs broken just below the knee, on Monday week, by carelessly placing his foot upon the bed of the engine, a shafting striking the essential member without giving due notice.

The death of the venerable Amasa Howard, which occurred last Wednesday, removes another old landmark of West Bridgewater. Mr. Howard was a little past 85, and had made an excellent record as a citizen of sterling integrity, kind and generous in his impulses, social and genial, a good neighbor, and a devoted husband and parent.

The ladies' sewing circle of the Methodist society in Plymouth have been engaged during the winter in making preparations for a fair, but nearly all of the articles upon which they have been working were recently badly damaged by a fire in a house where they were stored. The fire came very near destroying the whole of them, but water did so much injury that they will have upon thus "love's labor," as "lost."

Mr. Laban Burr, who died in Lakeville last week at the age of about 90 years, was well known to many of the older residents of the village, having been a stage driver on the route from that place to Boston before the days of railroads, and also from there to Plymouth. But few men are now living who can reach beyond his memory in the early events and progress of the country.

The annual report of Brockton gives the following figures for 1883: Number of polls assessed, males, 5559, of whom 1830 pay a property tax; female polls 25; increase of polls from 1882, males, 730; decrease of female polls from 1882, 11. Total valuation in 1883, $10,476,959; increase, $1,317,257; valuation of personal estate $2,272,354; increase, $426,697; rate of taxation, $16.60 2-3 on $1000; actual amount raised by taxation, $185,-154.48.

The people of Plymouth county are getting waked up somewhat on the half-shire question, and this week petitions have been presented to the legislature as follows: Citizens of East Bridgewater and Mattapoisett for making Bridgewater a shire town; from Mattapoisett, Scituate, Hull, Hingham & Hanover against making Brockton a shire town, and another petition from Mattapoisett favors Brockton for a shire town. E. B. Thompson and 49 others from Halifax, petition against making Brockton a shire town.

A sad accident, which has resulted in the death of Mr. Robert Orr, formerly a well-known builder in Boston, occurred Saturday night at the residence of Hon. B. W. Harris in East Bridgewater. Mr. Orr was Mr. Harris' father-in-law, and had his home with that gentleman. On Saturday night about 1 o'clock he left his bed, and had a lamp in his hand, from which his clothing took fire, and he was so badly burned that death ensued at about 1 P. M. Sunday. Mr. Harris burned one of his hands in endeavoring to extinguish the flames.

Miss Abigail B. Judson died last Friday week at Plymouth, at the advanced age of nearly ninety-three years. Miss Judson was the daughter of the Rev. Adoniram Judson, who, when the Third Congregationalist Church was organized and built its meeting-house at Training Green, was the first pastor. He was installed May 12, 1802, and remained with the church until August 12, 1817, when having changed his theological views to those of the Baptist denomination, he dissolved his connection here. He died in Scituate in 1826. His oldest son, and only brother of Miss Judson, the Rev. Adoniram Judson, was the celebrated missionary to Burmah, whose life and services are so well known, and have been so graphically described by his biographers.

The Abington Journal tells of a wonderful story of hardship of one Eugene M. Pinkham, of No. Abington, at Reed plantation in Aroostook county. He left Houlton more than two weeks ago, in search of work, intending to take the trip afoot. He had little or no money, was obliged at night to steal shelter in barns. Thursday night he had made about thirty-five miles of his journey over the deep snow and in the severe cold, and lay down to sleep in an old barn not far from Reed plantation. On awaking Friday morning he found both of his legs frozen so badly that he could not move and laid there all Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, crying and shouting for help, without attracting the attention of the family. On Tuesday he crawled out of the place, and succeeded in reaching a house, a quarter of a mile away, where he told his experience and swallowed his first bite of food in six days. The town officials were notified and Dr. Porter was summoned from Danforth. He now lies with his feet frozen to the ankle joint, and amputation will probably be decided on as necessary.

V. M. Dow, M. D., of New Haven, has a letter in another column.

It is said an Arizona judge resigned from the bench to become a hotel waiter. The judicial residue may satisfy a man's vanity, but it does not always fill the void created by the want of three square meals a day.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER!

TO ALL WANTING EMPLOYMENT.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its merit. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent. profit having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents, and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "Extraordinary Offer" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $100 to $200 a month clear, and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, above all expenses, can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or General Agent who would like to work more counties and work them through subagents for a long term of years, and who will bear a fair share of expense can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guarantee, and that but two weeks a day would give a profit of over $100 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine dealers and canvassers in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer, to send us at once the name and address of all such as they know. Address at once on this advertisement will not appear again, and you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

I WILL CURE ALL DISEASES of the SKIN, by the use of Vegetine. THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER

Has Relieved and cured Sufferers of Rheumatism by the Thousands.

REV. WM. T. WORTH

Recommends Vegetine for Rheumatism and Solution.

FALL RIVER, Mass., May 13 1878.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

DEAR SIR:—For some years I have been, at times, much troubled with Rheumatism, and have tried many remedies which have given me relief, but I have found nothing which would so thoroughly overcome it as Vegetine. I began to use it about two months ago, and have not had a touch of the disease since. I have also been troubled with a low state of the blood, and have found Vegetine to be very successful in purifying it, and I am now in good health. I cheerfully recommend Vegetine to all who are troubled with Rheumatism.

Yours Truly, MRS. R. B. CHURCH.

Neuralgia, Kidney Complaints, and Rheumatism Yield to Vegetine.

BOSTON, MASS., Nov. 3, 1879.

MR. H. R. STEVENS—DEAR SIR: For 20 years, or since the close of the late war, I have suffered with Neuralgia in the head, also had a great many kinds of medicine, but received no benefit, until about two years ago, when I commenced using it, and continued for about 6 months, the head trouble entirely left me, and I attribute it to the use of Vegetine. Yours truly, MRS. ANNIE E. HOWARD, 3 Dix Place, Boston.

Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

How Watch Cases are Made.

A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers surrounding each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use, without wearing through the gold.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 1, 1879.

I have used one of your Jaynes Bone Gold Watch Cases for seventeen years. I thought it would not last half as long as the heavier cases used before. I put in both six and seven dollar works, and have had the two years longer. Did not suspect it was a filled case, and was surprised by a present of a new one, which I must cheerfully recommend your cases to be all they are represented to be, and more.

O. MUCKLEY, Dep. Col. Int. Rev. 3d Dist. Penn.

RATHER TOO LONG.

After Twenty Years on the Wrong Side of Life a Virginian Turns the Tables.

"How long did you say?"

"Twenty years, I said. Up to the time I mentioned I had suffered from diseased liver for twenty years," said Mr. R. T. Hancock, of Richmond, Va., half smiling, as though thinking of that disagreeable exercise of his life. "At times I almost wished I had pleased Providence to send the liver from the business academy."

"Had enough—twenty years of that sort of thing, I suppose, is a fortune." "If but are the expected it?"

"The quickest was that some three years I went down to Kenny's drug store in this city, and bought one of HUMPHREY CAPCINE PORous PLASTERS, applied it and was relieved in a few hours, and put me so much on the mend my own words of indescribable joy."

RESCUED ON SUNDAY CONCERTS.

Mr. Beecher in his sermon on Sunday night said: "I trust that the Lord's day should be social, and I say that cultivation of social feelings, in any way that is a gratification, a obtaining, is part of the day. The best thing that you can do for some most people is to route them out into the parks and into the sunlight. I go for humanity, and so I go for the honor and glory of God. A part of Sunday should be devoted to intellectual development, and the church is the most accessible place for it.

I don't think it a good thing to bring in concerts and plays. You ask me why Sunshook cannot give an opera, as well as my choir sings on Sunday. I don't see the ground on which the discrimination can be made in law, but the law exists against it. It does not seem to me that they tend to public good, else I should advocate them. And for the lack of this I condemn them. Not from prejudice or abstract right, but because the Lord's day should be full of that which is best for man in mind and soul. I advocate Sunday sacred to the better part of man's day. My heart goes with my kind and the condition of those around us moves me most deeply. The day enlarges, develops, raises men up. Take the Sabbath away, and the industrial elements would sink. I am not fighting against anything but in favor of what I say.

Children.

If I were to choose among all gifts and my wishes that which, on the whole, makes life pleasantest, I would select the love of children. No accumulations can render this world wholly a welcome to one who has this love, but things look very pleasant. Wherever one goes, there are the little brethren and sisters of the mystic tie. No diversity of race or tongue makes much difference. A smile speaks the universal language. "If I value myself on any thing," said the lonely Hawthorne, "it is on having a smile that the children like me." They are the most child friendly creatures, they require so little gratitude (theirs are won in two minutes at that frank period), and so long as you are true to them they will be true to you. They are no argument, no bribery. They have a hearty appetite for gifts, no doubt, but it is not for those that they love the giver. Take the wealth of the world, and with it a little unforfeited affection, I will win all the children on a hearse away from you by empty-handed love. The gorgeous toys will dazzle them for a while, but they will be restless and recur to their natural friends. In visiting a house where there are children I do not like to take them presents; it is better to forego the pleasing to make an appetite for their welcome between yourself and the gift. Let that follow after you are gone.

To love children is to love childhood, in retrospect, as memory deserves; as first impulses being one of attraction, though it may be checked by later discoveries. Unless your heart commands at least as long a range as your eye, it is not worth much. The dearest saint in my calendar never entered a railway car that she did not look round for a baby, which, when discovered, must always be wrapped in one of her own shawls. If it was dirty, she would have been glad to bathe it; if ill, to heal it; it would not have seemed to her anything worthy the name of love to reek out its sympathy in words and not deeds. When I think of the self-devotion with which the human heart can combine of those saintly souls that are in love with sorrow, and that yearn to shelter all weak sons and all forms of unpopularity with the confidence that there must also be an instinct of parentage beyond this human race, a heart of mercies, one confession. As we all by-gone hours. Eight and twelve are feel ourselves protected. We are all infants before the Infinite, and as I turned from the cottage window to the resplendent sky it was to me a witness that more than our own, that some sympathy of affection, expanding from the narrow lattice till it reached the stars, gathering every created soul into the arms of Universal Love.

LONDON FIRES.

In the year 1803 there were 681 fires in London, being one in every 2,800 people, and to every 370 houses, and the population averaged 728 persons to each house. In 1850, the number of fires had increased to 898, being one to every 2,673 people and to every 347 houses; and the population was 7,239 per house. In 1860, the fires had further increased to 1,056, being each every 2,815 persons and 333 houses; and the population was 7.80 per house. In 1870 5 very bad year for fires in London, there were 1,046 (the largest number recorded), being one to every 3,649 persons and to every 398 houses; there were only 7.29 persons per house. In 1873 the fires were 1,348, being one to every 2,139 persons and to every 301 houses; and there were but 7.10 persons per house. In these thirty-four years the population increased 75 per cent., and the number of houses 82 per cent.; but the number of fires more than doubled, having increased 127 per cent. The figures are taken from the evidence of Captain Shaw, chief officer of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, given before the House of Commons Select Committee on the Metropolitan Buildings Bill of last session. Mr. Walter, a member of the Committee pointed out the imperfection of these returns, as giving no information as to the loss of life or destruction of property, the circumstances which render fires so ... possible; and no distinction is made between slight and great fires, though a fire like that at the Pantechnicon might cause more destruction of property than a hundred ordinary fires. On a subsequent day Captain Shaw supplied a further statement for the last ten years, showing that in that period, regarded as a whole, the slight fires in London constituted 18 per cent. of the whole number, and the serious fires only 14 per cent. In 1866 the slight fires were 75 per cent., and the serious 25 per cent., and the serious fires had climbed to 11 per cent. A further statement as to loss in the last four years shows that in that period 727 lives were endangered by 310 London fires; that 509 lives were saved, and 128 were lost, and that the last number represented 1 in every 5,676 persons alive, and 51 taken out alive, but so injured as not to recover. The number endangered comprised 289 males and 220 females, but only 266 females were saved, and 223 males 46 males and 74 females lost their lives.

FIGHTING A SNAKE.

Fahl to the white shark is to the mammoth, those with very weapons of defence very much formidable rope with and master him; even women, undaunted by their teeth, have been known to stab and destroy them in their beds. One day, a little boy about eight years old happened to be washed away from a catamaran which was managed by his father, who was then only initiating him into the hardships of the mode of life which he intended him to pursue; and before he could be rescued from the turbulent water, a shark drew him under, and he was seen no more. The father was not a man easily cast aside, and plashing between his teeth a large knife which he carried sheathed in his Guernsey-hood, plunged beneath the hollow waves. His despairing search was not long, for after a while was occasionally seen to rise, and then dive under the billows, as if actually engaged with his formidable foe. After a while the white foam was visibly tinged with blood, which was viewed with a sensation of horror by those who could only surmise what was going on under the water. The man was again seen to rise and disappear, so that the work of death was evidently not yet complete. After some further time had elapsed, to the astonishment of all who were assembled on the beach—for a considerable crowd had now collected—the body of a huge shark was seen for a few moments above the white spray, which it evidently tormented, and then disappeared. An instant after, the man rose above the surf and made for the shore. He seemed nearly exhausted, but had not a single mark on his body, which bore no evidence whatever of the perilous conflict in which he had been so recently engaged. He had scarcely landed when an immense shark was cast upon the beach by the billows. It was quite dead and was immediately dragged by the assembled natives beyond the reach of the surf. As soon as the shark was drawn to a place of security it was opened, when the head and limbs of the boy were taken from its stomach. The body was completely dismembered, and the head carried from it, but none of the parts were mutilated.

THE CLOCK MAKERS.

The peasantry of the southern portion of the Black Forest, of Alemannic race, says E. G. Seguin, in his book on "The Black Forest," have, from time immemorial, been known as clever and ingenious hand-workers, both in wood and metal; but during the last two hundred years they have originated and developed what is likely to become world-famous. For to them belongs the honor both of inventing and to a great extent of supplying the world with clocks. The first clock maker of the Black forest was, we do not know, nor whether he has ever reaped the reward of his ingenuity. His name has not come down in history, and the only tradition hints at his square-built, dark-skinned peasant, with long black hair hanging over his shoulders, and deep, solemn, meditative eyes; seated in his low-roofed cabin beside the great earthenware stove, all through the long winter days, when the snow is piled many feet high round his cottage world; puzzling out the great problem, which through weary long hours of patient toil and ever-deferred hope he has almost but not quite solved—the problem of the weights and wheels.

We can well fancy the first clumsy clock maker to have had as romantic and thrilling a story as had Palissy, the enameler, and in truth the results of the Black Forest genius have been as far-reaching, and probably more importance to the world, than those of the French potter have been. But the biography of the clockmaker is unwritten.

One of the very earliest, if not the first Black Forest clock is exhibited in the British Museum at Fortwangen. It is two hundred and eleven years old. It only shows the hours, and has but one hand to do so. If it was dirty, she would have been glad to bathe it; if ill, to heal it; it would not have seemed to her anything worthy the name of love to reek out its sympathy in words and deeds. When I think of the self-devotion with which the human heart can combine of those saintly souls that are in love with sorrow, and that yearn to shelter all weak sons and all forms of unpopularity with the confidence that there must also be an instinct of parentage beyond this human race, a heart of mercies, one confession. As we all by-gone hours. Eight and twelve are feel ourselves protected. We are all infants before the Infinite, and as I turned from the cottage window to the resplendent sky it was to me a witness that more than our own, that some sympathy of affection, expanding from the narrow lattice till it reached the stars, gathering every created soul into the arms of Universal Love.

LONDON FIRES.

In the year 1803 there were 681 fires in London, being one in every 2,800 people, and to every 370 houses, and the population averaged 728 persons to each house. In 1850, the number of fires had increased to 898, being one to every 2,673 people and to every 347 houses; and the population was 7.239 per house. In 1860, the fires had further increased to 1,056, being each every 2,815 persons and 333 houses; and the population was 7.80 per house. In 1870 5 very bad year for fires in London, there were 1,046 (the largest number recorded), being one to every 3,649 persons and to every 398 houses; there were only 7.29 persons per house. TRAVELING UNDER THE EARTH.

The completion of the Dunpowder pet, mentioned in a recent issue, will be in readiness in the early part of the coming year, will witness a somewhat novel excursion. The Water Board have for some time past been gradually discussing plans for the celebration of the event of the completion of the great enterprise. The arrangements will include, of course, an official inspection of the works by the Board, a difficulty of carrying out this plan, so far as the tunnel from Loch Reven to Lake Montebello is concerned, was not overestimated, but the inhabitants of that locality have been overcome. The tunnel is seven miles in length and about twelve feet diameter. Upon the day of inspection the water will be turned in gradually at the upper end of the tunnel and flow through until about four feet deep at the lower end. Several long boats will then be launched into the mouth of the tunnel at the Lake Montebello end in which the party will make the trip through the tunnel of water. They will be propelled by paddles or short oars. By the time the party has made half the distance the lower end of the tunnel will be completely filled by the water, which will be slowly turned on at the upper end during the trip. Headlights will be placed on the boats and in the arches which will have been erected where the fifteen shafts now are brilliant lights will be displayed, and large numbers will congregate at each shaft. Every arrangement will be made to prevent accidents, as the drowning of the party, which, of course, will include the city fathers, would be so inauspicious opening of the great water works. The trip up the subterranean river will occupy several hours and will be the first one of the kind ever made.—Baltimore Gazette.

General Jackson.

The late Peter Hagner, for many years Third Auditor of the United States Treasury, appointed originally under Washington's Administration, and continuing in the Treasury Department until General Taylor's Administration, used to tell the following characteristic anecdote of President Jackson: "It seems that some politician had been long making efforts to have Mr. Hagner removed to make place for himself. He discharged his duties and the rearing and training of her children, while the father fights the outside battle to win the wherewithal to meet expenses. Sooner or later care and toil leave their marks. It is true enough as Kingsley sings in the "Three Fishers," that

But toil not much working and weeping brush all the bloom from life's fruit.

An agreeable entertainment was given at the house of Mr. Jonathan Ford the past Thursday evening to the Friday Evening Club, by Mr. Ritchy of Cambridge, who delivered a lecture on the Bernese Alps very fully illustrated by Steropticon views. Mr. Ritchy had prevously passed a long time among the Switzerland Mountains, and had completed the difficult task of climbing to the summits of the most remarkable of them. Mr. Ritchy explained very clearly the action of the Glaciers and how the moraines were taken from the sides of the Mountains and borne down by the Glaciers.

Two well known gentlemen of this town recently made a trade. It seems that one of the men heard that the other had a buggy to sell or trade and as he had a horse that was rather the worse for wear he thought he would try and better his condition by exchanging for the buggy. He went down to see the man who owned the buggy and although it hardly came up to his expectations they effected a trade and the new owner of the buggy started off. He had not gone far when the vehicle collapsed and spilled the contents to the ground, and to make it all the more exasperating the new owner of the horse stood at the corner of the house taking it all in. They finally tied the wagon together and went away. The next morning the owner of the horse thought he would go out and feed the animal and congratulate himself on his new purchase, and upon opening the door his surprise can be imagined—he saw the beast stretched out upon the floor, dead. The conundrum about town now is: Who got the best of the trade?

One of the most renowned gunners of this neighborhood went hunting one day last week and returned as he went—empty handed. As he usually has good luck and returns with a large quantity of game his neighbors asked him the reason he didn't get anything, and he said he dida't know, but thought something must be the matter with the gun. One of the men then examined the firearm and found that the gunner had put in his shot first and then the powder which was a good excuse for the absence of game, and also showed the absentmindedness of the gunner.

Fox hunting is all the rage in N. W. Kingston. Frank M. Sinnott while in the woods at North Hill heard the dogs coming, and hurried home after his gun, getting back in time to kill the fox. The first blood he ever drew on that kind of an animal. He said he kept calm until he saw his game was dead, then his nerves gave out and his knees began to tremble. That was better than some of the party did that was out after the fox, C. Nash firing three shots at three different foxes and Elwood Chandler three shots at the same fox. Their knees must have trembled first.

Rural Improvements.

Mr. Editor.

As the Roral Society of Duxbury purpose to give an entertainment in the Duxbury Hall on Wednesday and Saturday evenings of this week, it may be to the point to explain what the Roral Society is, and what it intends to do. It had its origin at a Social Club last fall, where a young lady of the town, who had observed the working of similar societies in other towns, proposed to start one on a like plan here. She then gave an interesting account of what had been accomplished at these places, and what she thought could be done by us.

A society was soon after organized and members solicited, the yearly due being fifty cents for ladies, and one dollar and fifty cents for gentlemen. The number of members has now reached about fifty, but it is hoped that it will be largely increased when it becomes more known, and its object is more clearly understood. It is no sentimental or impracticable scheme that is contemplated, but which can only be full-realized by a larger expenditure of money than is ever likely to be at our command; but like every one with small means, who cannot do all he wishes, he can always do something; so we hope to make a beginning at once. The object of such a society is to make the town attractive by improving the roads, making sidewalks, beautifying the public places if there are any. Preserving and setting out trees along the roads, and anything that would add to the convenience or comfort of the people in places belonging wholly to the public.

All business of importance seems to have had a last farewell to the town along the South Shore. The young ones all go away because there is nothing for them to do. This must have caused much solicitude to every middle aged person interested in or residing in the locality. It would be the desire of all if factories or industries of some kind could be induced to settle here. But for some reason other places appear to be better situated for them. A good sea froot and small harbor are no longer needed as of old for transportation purposes. The modern demands seem to be beat met by a new, large and commodious harbors, and many places connected with them by ample railroad accommodations. The question then comes what is to become of these small shore towns. It is not within the pro of your correspondent to see but one opening for them, though he hopes, that he is mistaken and that there may be many others, and that is to make Summer watering places of them; and that is a business without doubt, which is yearly increasing. Some years ago when living in the Western States, I noticed a growing desire to come to the ocean's shore in the Summer time. Since then the evidences are that that feeling has not diminished. All the shore places cannot be Newports, and there must be different accommodations to suit the purses of the pleasure seekers. It is the humble opinion of the writer that in this competition, Duxbury has many advantages; a large land locked bay well suited for safe boat sailing, superior and safe bathing with water tempered by plats uncontaminated by sewerage. An accompaniment so often met with at the celebrated North Shore watering places, and a beach unsurpassed on all the New England coast, but to compete successfully, every possible attraction must be offered; and this course is equally necessary for our advancement and financial prosperity, and is unquestionably for the interest of every man, woman and child of the town.

DUXBURY, February 10.

SOUTH DUXBURY.

Mr. T. W. Herrick has left town for a visit to Bridgewater.

The dance which was to have taken place at the Standish House Friday evening, the 8th, was postponed on account of the storm to the following Tuesday evening.

A gentleman in South Duxbury has a kitten, which some two months ago lost its mate, since then puss has taken for her companion one of the horses in the stable, where she passes the night and leisure time during the day, curled up upon his back. The horse appearing to enjoy her company.

Mr. Joshua Freeman is building a handsome cottage at Standish Shore for Mrs. Elizabeth Jones of St. Louis. Other improvements are contemplated, and this pretty spot bids fair to continue its well deserved popularity. Mr. Palmer, the gentlemanly landlord of the Standish House, is highly esteemed by all, and if he continues its director for the next season, will undoubtedly have a full house.

EAST MARSHFIELD.

Last year at this time through these columns we had reason to congratulate the town on the good work done by its selectmen in clearing out the rum shops infesting its precincts. Would that we had the same cause to rejoice to-day, but we have not. To be sure we have been absent from town several months and have not had the opportunity to investigate the movements of the selectmen in sustaining and strengthening the newly acquired reputation of the town in bringing to justice, the lawless and miserable rumseller, who blasphemes the name of all that is good by feigning to cling with a death like grip to the skirts of civilization. Since our return we have made enquiries, whether the selectmen have obeyed the instructions of the town at the last March meeting in prosecuting any violation of the law, for which a sum of money was appropriated, but have not succeeded in finding any rumseller brought to justice, or any attempt to bring him there. What better backing up could any board have, than that given them by the town in March last. Is there no intoxicating liquors sold in town? I think in East Marshfield there is not as much sold, but in other parts of the town, especially at Brant Rock, there is, I learn, as much sold as ever. Was the member of the board dropped last spring the leader who dared "to face the lion in his den," and is it due to his absence from the board that the town must fall from its exalted position and sink into the old rut of rum rottenness in giving a free ride to dissipation? If so, the sooner we have that man back upon the board the better, and the sooner we rid ourselves of the present board, who standing on the fence do not know which way to jump, for fear of injuring some ones feelings or their chances of a re-election, the better. I would rather have one live man on the board who can jump in the direction of his convictions, and go ahead, and who will not have to drag along with him two associates to the city of Boston or elsewhere to consult in the purchase of a pin cushion, the study of penmanship in a register, the investment of a shilling or a sixpence, and the safe return of the "Honorable Board" to the town, for the town and at the expense of the town. Duty is the lesson of the hour; attend to it, or resign, should be the motto of every officer in the land.

A good anecdote is told of the Rev. Dr. Lane, that when, at not long since, he preached by request a sermon on future recognition, he was congratulated by a gentleman who was waiting for him in the vestibule. "But," he added, "I have attended this church as a stranger for about a year, and have never had a recognition. May I not ask you to be so kind as to give us another sermon on recognition here in this life, as among the best preparations for the life beyond."

Mr. Wales Allen Rogers and wife are settled in their new quarters, opposite their late residence, a new two story addition to the rear part gives a roomy house to themselves and Mrs. Abby Hatch. Their late residence being purchased by Mrs. Abbott Lapham is now occupied by herself and husband.

The dramatic entertainment of the young folks Thursday night at Rogers' Hall is looked forward to with some interest by the villagers as the event of the season. Admission fifteen cents to the entertainment, and thirty five cents extra for those who join in the dance at the close.

Don't forget the meeting of the South Shore Farmers' Club at Agricultural Hall, Marshfield, next Wednesday, the 20th instant. All are invited whether members or not, both ladies and gentlemen. A good time is anticipated.

S. C. Stetson excavated a nest of sixteen black snakes last week. The sixteen measured seventy-two feet, an average of four and a half feet each.

SEA VIEW.

Mrs. George Randall, who is spending the winter in Boston is, in greatly improved health.

Mrs. Cornelius Keen, who broke her arm a few weeks since, is improving rapidly. The knitting of the bone under the circumstances is really wonderful. Dr. Davie attended the case.

Gustavus and Warren F. White are to build a large hen house on the land of the former, and intend starting the poultry business.

SOUTH SCITUATE.

Hon. Daniel E. Damon, formerly of this town, and more recently Register of Probate, has taken an office in Plymouth, and intends to attend to general law business, and particularly to matters connected with probate, with which no man in Plymouth county is better acquainted.

We would call attention to the advertisement of Smith & Torrey, tailors, 424 Washington St., Boston, in another column, where can be found a fine and well selected stock of woolens, of their own importations, which they offer to cut into fashionable garments, at reasonable prices.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Studley, of Hanover, celebrated their golden wedding, Saturday evening, February second, in the presence of a large company. The presentation speech was made by Miss Hattie Simmons and Mr. Eben Simmons, in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Studley, responded. A very pleasant occasion was enjoyed.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Mrs. Higgins, wife of Mr. Freeman Higgins, died very suddenly Saturday afternoon at about three o'clock. The news of her death was received with surprise by all, as she had not been seriously ill but a day or two and many had not heard of her illness, she was the picture of health and very lively in her manners. Her husband has the deep sympathy of all in his bereavement. She leaves a bright little daughter about ten years of age.

Mr. Daniel Damon, of this village, died after a brief illness on the morning of the 27th ult., aged seventy-seven. The funeral services occurred at his late residence on the 29th, conducted by Rev. Mr. Swett, of North Hanover. Mr. Damon in his early life taught school to some extent. For many years past he has resided on South street, and has been noted for his skill in laying stone, and was at one time almost constantly employed in that business. For a few years past, however, his age has prevented his taking an active part in so severe an employment. One of his sons, Daniel E. Damon, was late Register of Probate for Plymouth County. He leaves several other sons and daughters, all of whom are respected members of society.

The Leap Year Party at Assinippi Hall, February first, was a decided success. It was fortunate that all who were invited did not present themselves, else there would have been a crowd, as it was the hall was well filled, the music excellent, the management superior, and the supper was the right thing in the right place. The young ladies just tucked the young gents under their arms, (we believe that is the way they talk when it is the other way) and marched them to supper in good style. In short, in all respects they taught the young gentlemen by example, how they ought to do, during the next three years.

By an unavoidable delay the two items above appear this week, instead of last.

There is a good deal said about the dog law just now because the legislature propose to tinker it a little. We don't see why it isn't pretty good now if only enforced. We don't think that it stops many from keeping dogs that desire to, and it brings in quite a revenue. We reckoned up the other day, the probable dog tax next April, to be paid by the residents on about a mile of road in this part of the town, and found it to be thirty-four dollars, and it wasn't much of a mile of road for residences either. We could find more houses and families to the mile in many places in town. We are not sure though that we could find more dogs. If we could, then the dog tax ought to yield more than it usually does.

We used to think that annual sessions of the legislature were about the thing, but sometimes we are inclined to to think, if they only occurred once in about ten years, we could manage to find out something about a law before it was changed. Then, too, we should have only one-tenth as many of those tiresome hearings, where the same old story is repeated only to end in the same report of inexpedient, until the legislators patience is exhausted and "because of importunity" that which would otherwise be rejected is reported favorably. If there is no other way to bar out some of the hearings about subjects that have been reported upon, then let us have fewer sessions.
